Mr. Blaine and the Presidency

DANIEL CARROLL NEW YORK.

UNION, N. Y., May 12, 1884.

As the time for holding the National Republican Convention approaches, the question of the choice of a candidate for President of the United States is being discussed in every household.

Some weeks ago when it was evident that the people, the Republican masses, all over the country, were looking toward James G. Blaine as their standard bearer in the coming national contest, his political opponents, and his political enemies within his own party started the cry that it would be unwise to nominate him because of the opposition to his nomination from what is termed the "dark wing" of the Republican party in this State. These enemies had for a time some weight. They pointed to the withdrawal of Mr. C. C. Condit and Mr. Platt from the Senate, they knew of the contest over the governorship of New York. They knew that for some reasons Gov. Grant and Mr. Blaine had not been upon terms of intimacy for some years. But upon investigation it was found that Senator Condit and his friends would loyally abide the result of the National Convention. It was found that Mr.

Platt was not only in the majority for Mr. Blaine, but that Gov. Condit believed

Mr. Blaine could secure more Republican votes in New York than any other man who could be selected. Condit visited Washington, and while there was guest of his old friend Gen. Grant, he sent for Mr.

Blaine to call on him. Mr. Blaine, being unable, by reason of his accident, to go upon this occasion, Mr. Blaine wrote him a long and friendly letter, and they have since been in the closest and true friendship. All these circumstances explain the story that Mr.

Blaine could not receive the support of the "dark wing" of the Republican party of this State. In the many times his friends were accused of being "dark wing" Republicans, they have always been able to show that they were not. In every State of the Union, Mr. Blaine has been able to show that he is a true Republican. He has been able to show that he is a true Republican, and that he is

can. He has been able to show that he
